

From left to right: Samantha Marsh, Karina Greenwood, Nora Van Trotsenburg, Meg Soderlund, Madeleine Seed, Anna Nielsen, Allison Williams, Nathan Clarke, Elizabeth Haupt, Raquel Robbins, Jessica Phillips, Maia Armstrong-Evans, Susanne Haupt, Brendan Neary, Sophie Yamaguchi. Missing from Photo: Patricia Chisholm. Photo by Emily Leischner.

UBC Students in ANTH 431 “Museum Practice and Curatorship” curated Nuxalk Radio: One Nation, Many Voices with the help of Teaching Assistant Emily Leischner and Instructor Jennifer Kramer.

We worked under the guidance and permission of the Alkw Media Society and the Nuxalk Radio Board.

We would like to thank the following Nuxalkmc for generously sharing their time, experience, and knowledge with us: Aycts'mqa (Lori George), Cynthia Snow, Dayna Tallio, Delilah Nappie, Jennifer Andy, Keanu McKay, Laaqwmays (Jerrel Nelson), Nan (Maurice Webber), Nuhawhawta (Sheldon Tallio), Nukiklikmacw (Dale McCreery), Nunanta (Iris Siwallace), Nuskmata (Jacinda Mack), Qaqlis (Lisa Tallio), Qwawx (Spencer Siwallace), Slts'lani (Banchi Hanuse), Sixilaaxayc (Noel Pootlass), Snxakila (Clyde Tallio), Spuxta Nelson, Ts'xwiixw (Megan Moody), Txta (Roland Mack), and Ximana (Nola Mack).

We thank UBC for granting us a “UBC Community Engagement Partnership Recognition Fund” that supported our university-community collaboration and enabled us to produce this exhibition.

We recognize and thank Museum of Anthropology (MOA) staff: Cody Rocko, MOA Graphic Designer, Gerald Lawson, MOA Oral History Language Lab Coordinator, and Katelyn Roberts, MOA Curatorial Graphic Design Intern for helping us with the exhibition's graphic design and audio.

We acknowledge and thank the Musqueam Nation for allowing us to display this exhibition on their traditional, ancestral, and unceded territory.